BIOGRAPHY: A product of hardworking parents who are both educators, King Davis understands the antidote to success is founded on the principles of a strong work ethic, integrity, and self-determination.

Originally from the Dallas area, King Davis grew up a three-sport athlete in high school rising and excelling as the team's quarterback exuding leadership skills well beyond his years.

Though King earned a four-year scholarship to play football at New Mexico State University, King has never lost sight that academics and community service play a bigger part in his life than scoring touchdowns.

Whether it's volunteering as a student mentor for young kids extolling the virtues of staying in school or landscaping around local community businesses to enhance the surroundings, King is making a difference more importantly, making his parents proud.

Companies in search of that special leader that can bridge work ethic and a strong education while possessing a maturity for the world around them, look no further than King Davis.

Note: Aspiring to be a part of the investment banking or municipal finance industry, King Davis is actively pursuing a securities license.
